Mr. John T. Moore and Miss Nanie Holbrook, of Mouth of Hood, were married by Esq. Sam Burton one day last week. The parents of the young lady were disposed to be hard-hearted in the matter, and the night before the marriage John attempted the elopement act but was frustrated in the endeavor. Next day the old folks relented, a license was procured, and, accompanied by several friends, they sought the "squire." He was found, and in the public road, on top of hill between Blaine and Rich creeks, the twain were made one flesh.

We extend our of congratulation.

Incendiarism and Lead.
There stood many years prior to last Friday night a large handsome frame house nearly opposite the mouth of George's creek, owned by the late Gordon Burgess, and since his death occupied by his widow and her family. On the night mentioned this house and nearly all its contents were destroyed by fire. The flames were discovered about eleven o'clock, and were beyond doubt of incendiary origin. Saturday morning Edward Burgess, the widow's son, went before a magistrate and swore out a warrant charging John W. Swetnam with setting fire to the house. Swetnam was arrested and brought to Louisa. Police Judge Wallace held him in three hundred dollars bail for his appearance for examination to-morrow at Peach Orchard.

It is charged that Dr. Swetnam, who is a son-in-law of Mrs. Burgess, had threatened to not only kill his relatives, with whom he had not been on good terms for a long time, but to burn the house. It is also said that mule tracks were seen near the house, where the animal had been hitched during the night, and Swetnam rides a mule. On the other hand it is alleged—that the doctor was in Peach Orchard the night of the fire, so intoxicated that he could not have gone to the ill-fated house. We refrain from any expression of opinion concerning the unfortunate affair, hoping however, for the sake of the accused and his relatives that he may be found innocent of the monstrous charge. This is chapter one of an exciting history. Number two opens with

ALMOST A TRAGEDY.
It could not reasonably be expected that the hot blood aroused by the incident above narrated would cool very soon, or that it would cool without further trouble, particularly as Swetnam unfortunately persisted in indulging in line or. He went back to Peach Orchard on the Saturday afternoon train, and on Sunday he was at the scene of Friday's fire. Not far above the Burgess place lives a man named Rose. Here was Edward Burgess, Dr. Swetnam's brother-in-law. Swetnam rode toward the house where Burgess was standing with a rifle in his hand. Swetnam was riding a mule, and as he caught sight of his brother-in-law he reached for his pistol. Burgess was too quick for him, for he instantly raised his rifle and fired, the ball going through the doctor's bridle-hand and grazing his body. It was reported here that he was shot in the chest and would die, but the wound was as above stated. We presume that at the examination to be held on the 9th all the facts connected with this very unfortunate affair will be brought to light. We should have said before that at the time the house was burned Dr. Swetnam's wife and children were there with Mrs. Burgess.
